

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

1.1 Conclusion

Based on the data analysis and discussion in the previous chapter, the writer draw the following conclusions:

It was found that students made five errors in their writing, namely Addition, Omission, Misformation, Misordering and Miscellaneous. The most common types of students' errors was omission with 37.50% or 69 errors. The second type was addition with 21.20% or 39 errors. The third type was missformation with 19.02% or 35 errors. The fourth type was misordering with 4.35% or 8 errors, and there were miscellaneous or other errors in students' writing, that was misspellings errors with 17.93% or 33 errors

Furthermore, the findings indicated three common reasons for students errors namely Context of Learning (mentioned 13 times), Interlingual Transfer (mentioned 5 times), and the last one was Intralingual Transfer (mentioned 4 times).

1.2 Suggestion

1. For English Teacher

The English teacher is expected to give clear explanation when she/he is explaining the materials. The teacher should pay more attention to students who do not pay attention to the lessons, use engaging techniques to increase the students' motivation, especially for learning recount texts, and use a variety of English-language sources related to teaching, particularly recount writing and teaching writing in general. Finally, the teacher should provide feedback on the students' assignments to help them improve their knowledge.

2. For Future Researcher:

Future researchers are expected to conduct studies using other taxonomies of errors, such as generic structure of students' recount writing tasks, because the finding of this present study concentrated on analyzing students' errors in language features.

Stories about activities during the past.

During my last holiday, I made a lot of handcrafts at that time, I was crazy about art and creativity - many ideas had come to my mind. I read three note books so I could read them again. Also, I searched other ideas from internet.

My parents helped me to prepare the materials. They also gave me money to buy things I needed on the first day. I painted on some rocks. People can't rock it. It was so fun. My siblings joined me on the third day. Then, my siblings and I made paper crafts from used newspapers and magazines.

The last activity was sewing. My mother is a tailor so I learn how to sew from her. We produced many useful things. Finally, I really enjoyed my last holiday.
